I worked with Edna for 36 of her 46 years at Red Lobster. During that time I learned that she loved her church and her family very dearly. I also figured out that she had a lot of wisdom and good advice. When I would cry to her about co-workers being mean to me she finally got fed up and told me not to just take their BS and stand up for myself which I'm working on.

The shifts that I worked in the kitchen doing prep work with her I learned that no matter how hard I tried I could never keep up with her. There were times I thought I was going to finish my par sheet before she finished hers but she would always get done before I did but she would ask what I had left and it was always bagging broccoli portions, sometimes it was well over a hundred portions. We both hated doing broccoli but she spoiled me and would do my broccoli now if I work in the kitchen I'm on my own. Rest in peace friend
